

Notes In Advance

The discount note requires the interest to be paid in advance and is subtracted from the principal before the borrower receives the loan. Treasury bills are discount notes issued by the U.S. government.

To compute the actual rate of interest charged for a discount note, solve for r in the simple interest formula $i = prt$ with p = net principal received (after the interest is deducted from the principal). The actual rate of interest compares the amount of interest you paid to the net amount you receive.

Problem: Compute using the simple interest formula, when $500 is borrowed at 8% for 6 months:

- Interest charged = A. $480
- Amount borrower receives on a simple interest note = B. $500
- C. 8%
- Amount borrower receives on a discounted note = D. $20
- E. 8 1/3%
- Actual rate of interest for discount note =
